

AbsoluteClimo Expects Hurricane Ida U.S. Insured Losses of $15 to $25B Most Likely

AbsoluteClimo's models are well calibrated and consistently skillful

Honolulu (3 September 2021) - AbsoluteClimo's wholly independent global climate physics model G©TCHA™ linked with our financially engineered machine learning models, Clim©Cats™, indicates U.S. insured market losses (excluding flooding) from hurricane Ida this week to most likely range from 15bn to 25bn USD. AbsoluteClimo's prediction models are well calibrated and consistently skillful, enabling us to serve clients with a world first-and-only novel business model pegged to forecast skill (accuracy) at up to five years lead time.

Hurricane Ida was not materially influenced by the often overstated El Niño Southern Oscillation or hodgepodge of so-called teleconnections, and sea surface temperature anomalies in the Gulf of Mexico prior to Ida's development were unremarkable.

In 2021, Honolulu headquartered AbsoluteClimo LLC celebrated its fifth year of business as a founder funded wholly independent concern. We announced a strategic partnership with Singapore reinsurance actuarial firm AKR Zell, and additions to our global advisory team of leading practitioners in quantitative finance, machine learning, artificial intelligence and business development, Dr. Ajay Somani and Dr. Chris Maeda.

AbsoluteClimo's mission is bettering life on Earth (©) by helping people impacted by climate variability and change.
