

AbsoluteClimo to Present at The Montgomery Summit

Selected from 4,000 nominated companies, AbsoluteClimo will present breakthrough climate forecasting technology for enterprise risk management to exclusive audience of innovators, investors and business leaders

HONOLULU (12 February 2017) - AbsoluteClimo, a world leader specializing in business-to-business climate forecasting and risk management, has been selected to present at the annual Montgomery Summit, the leading business and technology conference that will take place in Santa Monica, Calif. on March 8 and 9. AbsoluteClimo will exhibit as part of the First Look Companies track, presenting its breakthrough global climate prediction model and marketing position to an invited audience of 1,000 entrepreneurs, corporate executives and venture capitalists.

"We're thrilled to showcase our home grown whole Earth climate model for enterprise risk management. G©TCHA [pronounced "got·cha" \ 'gä-chə\] creates skillful climate forecasts 1 to 30 months into the future at 25-km resolution, a world first and rare paradigm shift", said Brendan Lane Larson, co-founder and climatologist of AbsoluteClimo. "We help businesses economically sensitive to climate variability confidently plan and hedge risk with monthly, quarterly, seasonal and annual+ lead times. G©TCHA's expression of forecast confidence has never been done before, we are opening up a new frontier!"

Before G©TCHA there was nothing more than entertainment: almanacs, ground hogs, tea leaf readers, no-skill bureaucratic research experiments, and irritating references to Godzilla El Niño.

Larson added, "Our value proposition is substantial. Besides the multi-trillion dollar global agriculture industry, we foresee our skillful climate forecasts being of great service to people worldwide operating in energy, industry (construction, water, and retail), financial services (hedge funds, trading, insurance and reinsurance), transportation (air, water, land), and public services (health and hazards). The Montgomery Summit is a perfect First Look venue for us."

"The caliber of companies nominated for this year's Summit was higher than ever and the selected presenters will provide excellent insight and expertise into their respective and rapidly evolving fields – from enterprise data to financial technologies to connected devices," said Jamie Montgomery, founder of The Montgomery Summit. "Our goal is to connect technology's best entrepreneurs with incredible investors, partners and advisers and to facilitate meetings that will lead to success for all parties."

This year, a global committee of senior investors from top venture capital and growth funds, prior Summit attendees, researchers, entrepreneurs and Summit partners and staff selected 140 companies to present from over 4,000 nominations. Nominations were evaluated by each company's sector, stage, growth and engagement metrics, as well as criteria including management, vision, and more.

In addition to presentations from top private growth company CEOs, the two-day event features industry leaders and top innovators in a series of keynotes, panels and salons. Speakers at this year's Summit include Gen. (Ret) David H. Petraeus, member, chairman KKR Global Institute; Spencer Rascoff, CEO, Zillow; Michael Milken, chairman, Milken Institute; and Shannon Lucas, senior innovation architect, Cisco Hyper Innovation Living Lab. Additionally, a Female Founders program that will highlight the rising role of female entrepreneurs and investors in the technology world is scheduled on March 7th.
